ITEM 1. BUSINESS

GENERAL DEVELOPMENT OF BUSINESS

West Bancorporation, Inc. (the “Company” or “West Bancorporation”) is an Iowa corporation and financial holding company registered under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended. The Company owns West Bank, an Iowa chartered bank headquartered in West Des Moines, Iowa. Prior to December 31, 2009, the Company also owned WB Capital Management Inc. (“WB Capital”), a registered investment advisory firm also headquartered in West Des Moines. WB Capital was sold as of December 31, 2009. Accordingly, on January 1, 2010, the Company's only active subsidiary and primary business activity was West Bank.

The Company reported a loss available to common stockholders of ($16,893,000) for the year ended December 31, 2009. This was the Company's first ever annual loss.

On July 15, 2009, Thomas E. Stanberry resigned as Chairman, President, and Chief Executive Officer and director of the Company. Jack G. Wahlig and Robert G. Pulver were elected Chair and Vice-Chair, respectively, of the Company's Board of Directors on the same day. In addition, David R. Milligan was hired as interim Chief Executive Officer of the Company and interim Chief Executive Officer of West Bank. Mr. Milligan also became Chairman of the West Bank Board of Directors. On March 8, 2010, the Company announced that David D. Nelson had been hired as Chief Executive Officer and President of the Company and Chairman and Chief Executive Officer of West Bank. Mr. Nelson's employment by the Company will commence on or about April 1, 2010.

The Company and West Bank had approximately 160 employees on December 31, 2009.

SEGMENTS AND DISCONTINUED OPERATIONS

In mid-2009 the Company decided to sell WB Capital. On October 1, 2009, the Company entered into a definitive agreement to sell one hundred percent of the stock in WB Capital to Miles Capital Holdings, Inc. The transaction closed on December 31. For financial reporting purposes, the assets and liabilities of WB Capital have been reclassified as discontinued operations held for sale for periods prior to 2009. The results of operations and cash flows of WB Capital have also been reclassified and reflected on those statements as discontinued operations for both the current and prior year periods reported. The 2009 loss from discontinued operations was ($9,566,000), which included the recognition of goodwill impairment of $11,160,000.

WB Capital was the only activity in the Company's previously reported investment advisory segment disclosures. The remainder of the Company was reported in the banking segment. Therefore, the Company is no longer disclosing segment information. The financial statements appearing on pages 32 through 70 of the Company's Appendix to the Proxy Statement, which was filed on March 12, 2010, is incorporated herein by reference.

WEST BANK

West Bank is a community commercial bank that was organized in 1893. The Company was formed in 1984 to own West Bank.

West Bank provides full-service community banking and trust services to customers located primarily in the Des Moines and Iowa City, Iowa metropolitan areas, as well as correspondent banking services to financial organizations located primarily in Iowa. West Bank has eleven full-service offices, the newest one being an office opened in Waukee, Iowa during February 2009.

West Bank's business strategy emphasizes strong business and personal relationships between the bank and its customers and the delivery of products and services that meet the individualized needs of those customers. West Bank emphasizes strong cost controls while striving to achieve return on equity and net income goals. To accomplish these goals, West Bank focuses on local market small- to medium-sized businesses that traditionally wish to develop an exclusive relationship with a single bank. West Bank has the size to give the personal attention required by business owners, in addition to the credit expertise and entrepreneurial attitude to help businesses meet their financial services needs.

Table of Contents

West Bank offers all basic types of credit to its customers including commercial, real estate, and consumer loans. West Bank offers trust services typically found in a commercial bank with trust powers including the administration of estates, conservatorships, personal trusts, and agency accounts. West Bank also originates residential mortgages that are primarily sold in the secondary market. In addition, West Bank offers a full range of deposit services including checking, savings, money market accounts, and time certificates of deposit. All of West Bank's deposit accounts are FDIC insured up to the maximum amount determined by law.

During 2007, West Bank began working with SmartyPig, LLC to develop the banking platform for an innovative internet-based savings and rewards program (www.smartypig.com). In return for its initial development efforts and some seed capital, West Bank acquired a 20 percent ownership interest in SmartyPig, LLC. That interest was diluted to 13 percent in 2009 due to additional investors acquiring part of the company. As of February 28, 2010, West Bank held approximately $212 million in SmartyPig® related savings account deposits.

The total deposits of the SmartyPig® program have grown and are expected to grow significantly and, accordingly, have become a disproportionate percentage of West Bank's deposits. Therefore, West Bank has asked SmartyPig, LLC to move the savings accounts to a larger institution. West Bank believes this will be accomplished in 2010, and it has sufficient liquidity to facilitate such a transfer.

The Company believes that the loss of deposits of any one customer or of a few customers, including the SmartyPig®-related deposits, would not have adverse material effects on West Bank's operations or core deposit base. Furthermore, the Company believes that the loss of any one or a few customers would not have a material effect on the Company.

The market areas served by West Bank are highly competitive with respect to both loans and deposits. West Bank competes with other commercial banks, savings and loan associations, credit unions, mortgage companies, finance affiliates of auto companies, and other financial service providers. Some of these competitors are local, while others are nationwide. The major local commercial bank competitors include Bankers Trust Company, NA, First American Bank, Hills Bank & Trust Company, and MidWestOne Bank. Bank of the West, a regional bank, and several nationwide banks, including Bank of America, Regions Bank, U.S. Bank, NA, and Wells Fargo Bank, NA are also competitors. The larger banks have certain competitive advantages due to their abilities to pursue substantial advertising campaigns and allocate their investment assets to out-of-market geographic regions with potentially higher returns. Such banks also offer certain services, for example, international and conduit financing transactions, which are not offered directly by West Bank. These larger banking organizations have much higher legal lending limits than West Bank and, therefore, may be better able to service large regional, national, and global commercial customers.

In order to compete to the fullest extent possible with the other financial institutions in its primary trade area, West Bank uses the flexibility that is afforded by its local management. This includes an emphasis on specialized services, local promotional activities, and personal contacts by West Bank's officers, directors, and employees. In particular, West Bank competes for deposits principally by offering depositors a variety of deposit programs, convenient office locations and hours, and other personalized services. West Bank competes for loans primarily by offering competitive interest rates, experienced lending personnel with local decision-making authority, flexible loan arrangements, and quality products and services.

West Bank also competes with financial markets for funds. Yields on corporate and government debt securities and commercial paper affect West Bank's ability to attract and hold deposits. West Bank also competes for funds with money market accounts and similar investment vehicles offered by brokerage firms, mutual fund companies, internet banks, and others.

According to the FDIC's Summary of Deposits, as of June 30, 2009, there were thirty-seven other banks and savings and loan associations operating within Polk County, Iowa, where seven of West Bank's offices are located. West Bank ranked fifth based on total deposits of all banking offices in Polk County. As of June 30, 2009, there were sixteen other banks and savings and loan associations within Johnson County, Iowa, which includes Iowa City. Three West Bank offices are located in Johnson County. West Bank ranked fourth based on total deposits of all banking offices in Johnson County. West Bank also has one office located in Dallas County. For the entire state, West Bank ranked ninth in terms of deposit size.

SUPERVISION AND REGULATION

The Company and West Bank are subject to extensive federal and state regulation and supervision. Regulation and supervision of financial institutions is intended primarily to protect customers and the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation ("FDIC") insurance fund rather than shareholders of the Company. The laws and regulations affecting banks and financial holding companies change regularly. Any future change in applicable laws, regulations, or regulatory policies may have material effects on the business, operations, and prospects of the Company which can not now be fully anticipated. Some, but not all, of the regulatory and supervisory environment in which the Company and West Bank exist are discussed below.

Table of Contents

As a financial holding company, West Bancorporation is subject to regulation under the Bank Holding Company Act of 1956, as amended (“BHCA”), which subjects the Company and West Bank to supervision and examination by the Federal Reserve. The Company files quarterly and annual reports of its operations and such additional information as the Federal Reserve may require.

Financial holding companies are permitted to engage in certain financial activities through affiliates that were previously prohibited activities for bank holding companies. Such financial activities include securities and insurance underwriting and merchant banking. The Company elected to become a financial holding company during 2007. The Company’s status as a financial holding company gives it additional flexibility to engage in a broader range of financial and other activities than is permissible for non-financial bank holding companies.

A financial holding company is required to serve as a source of financial strength to its subsidiary bank(s) and may not conduct its operations in an unsafe or unsound manner. In addition, it is the Federal Reserve’s position that in serving as a source of strength to its subsidiary bank, a financial holding company should use available resources to provide adequate capital funds to its subsidiary bank during periods of financial stress or adversity. It should also maintain the financial flexibility and capacity to obtain additional resources for providing assistance to its subsidiary bank. A financial holding company’s failure to meet its obligations to serve as a source of strength to its subsidiary bank will generally be considered by the Federal Reserve to be an unsafe and unsound banking practice, a violation of the Federal Reserve’s regulations, or both.

Financial holding companies must obtain the approval of the Federal Reserve before they: (1) acquire direct or indirect ownership or control of any voting stock of any bank if, after such acquisition, they would own or control, directly or indirectly, more than five percent of the voting stock of such bank; (2) merge or consolidate with another financial or bank holding company; or (3) acquire substantially all of the assets of any additional banks.

With certain exceptions, the BHCA also prohibits financial holding companies from acquiring direct or indirect ownership or control of voting stock in any company other than a bank or bank holding company unless the Federal Reserve finds the company’s business to be incidental to the business of banking. When making this determination, the Federal Reserve in part considers whether allowing a financial holding company to engage in those activities would offer advantages to the public that would outweigh possible adverse effects. A financial holding company may engage in permissible non-banking activities on a de novo basis, if the holding company meets certain criteria and notifies the Federal Reserve within ten business days after the activity has commenced.

The Company and West Bank are deemed affiliates within the meaning of the Federal Reserve Act, and transactions between affiliates are subject to certain restrictions. Generally, the Federal Reserve Act: (1) limits the extent to which the financial institution or its subsidiaries may engage in “covered transactions” with an affiliate; and (2) requires all transactions with an affiliate, whether or not “covered transactions,” to be on terms substantially the same, or at least as favorable to the institution or subsidiary, as those provided to a non-affiliate. The term “covered transaction” includes the making of loans, purchase of assets, issuance of guarantees, and similar transactions.

On December 31, 2008, the Company sold 36,000 shares of cumulative senior preferred stock and a warrant to purchase 474,100 shares of common stock for $36 million to the United States Department of the Treasury under the Capital Purchase Program (“CPP” or “TARP”). TARP participants are subject to various executive compensation, dividend, and corporate governance regulations. For example, incentive compensation for covered senior executive officers is limited to one-third of total annual compensation and must be in the form of long-term restricted stock. Severance benefits for such officers are prohibited while the preferred stock is outstanding. The Company’s Compensation Committee has additional duties and reporting requirements during that period.

West Bank is a state-chartered bank subject to primary federal regulation and supervision by the FDIC and the Iowa Division of Banking. The federal laws applicable to West Bank regulate, among other things, the scope of its business, its investments, its reserves against deposits, the timing of the availability of deposited funds, and the nature and amount of collateral for loans. West Bank files quarterly reports of its operations with the Federal Financial Institutions Examination Council (“FFIEC”).

The FDIC has authority to prohibit banks under its supervision from engaging in what it considers to be unsafe and unsound business practices. The Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation Improvement Act of 1991 (“FDICIA”) required federal banking regulators to adopt regulations or guidelines in a number of areas to ensure bank safety and soundness, including internal controls, credit underwriting, asset growth, earnings, management compensation, and ratios of classified assets to capital. FDICIA also contains provisions that are intended to change independent auditing requirements, restrict the activities of state-chartered insured banks, amend various consumer banking laws, limit the ability of “undercapitalized banks” to borrow from the Federal Reserve’s discount window, require regulators to perform periodic on-site bank examinations, and set standards for real estate lending.

West Bank is subject to limitations on the aggregate amount of loans that it can make to any one borrower, including related entities. Subject to numerous exceptions based on the type of loans and collateral, applicable statutes and regulations generally limit loans to one borrower to 15 percent of total equity and reserves. West Bank is in compliance with applicable requirements governing loans to one borrower.

Beginning in November 2008, the FDIC increased the insurance coverage for customer deposit accounts up to a maximum amount of $250,000 through December 31, 2009. The time period of the increased coverage was subsequently extended through 2013. The FDIC adopted a risk-based insurance assessment system under which depository institutions contribute funds to the FDIC insurance fund based on their risk classification. The FDIC had authority to impose special assessments on deposits through December 31, 2009 and did so effective for the second quarter of 2009.

In November 2008, the FDIC also adopted the Temporary Liquidity Guarantee Program, (“TLGP”) which provided financial institutions with the option to participate in the ability to add unlimited FDIC coverage for noninterest-bearing transaction accounts and select interest-bearing transaction accounts. West Bank opted to participate in this program, which costs $0.10 per $100 of qualifying deposits in excess of $250,000 through December 31, 2009, with an increase to $0.15 per $100 in 2010. The TLGP is currently scheduled to end on June 30, 2010.

The FDIC may terminate the deposit insurance of any insured depository institution if it determines after an administrative hearing that the institution has engaged or is engaging in unsafe or unsound practices, is in an unsafe or unsound condition to continue operations, or has violated any applicable law.

The Federal Reserve, the FDIC, and the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (“OCC”) (collectively, the “Agencies”) have adopted risk-based capital guidelines for banks and bank holding companies that are designed to make regulatory capital requirements more sensitive to differences in risk profiles among banks and bank holding companies and to account for off-balance sheet items. Failure to achieve and maintain adequate capital levels may give rise to supervisory action through the issuance of a capital directive to ensure the maintenance of required capital levels. West Bank is in compliance with applicable regulatory capital level requirements.

The current guidelines require all federally regulated banks to maintain a minimum risk-based total capital ratio equal to eight percent, of which at least four percent must be Tier 1 capital. Tier 1 capital includes common shareholders’ equity, qualifying perpetual preferred stock, and minority interests in equity accounts of consolidated subsidiaries, but excludes goodwill and most other intangibles, and the allowance for loan and lease losses. Tier 2 capital includes the excess of any preferred stock not included in Tier 1 capital, mandatory convertible securities, hybrid capital instruments, subordinated debt and intermediate-term preferred stock, and general reserve for loan and lease losses up to 1.25 percent of risk-weighted assets. West Bank has not received any notice indicating it will be subject to higher capital requirements.

The Agencies must take certain “prompt corrective action” when a bank fails to meet capital requirements. The regulations establish and define five capital levels: (1) “well-capitalized,” (2) “adequately capitalized,” (3) “undercapitalized,” (4) “significantly undercapitalized,” and (5) “critically undercapitalized.” Increasingly severe restrictions are imposed on the payment of dividends and management fees, asset growth, and other aspects of the operations of institutions that fall below the category of being “adequately capitalized.” As of the date of this Annual Report on Form 10-K, neither the Company nor West Bank was subject to any regulatory order, agreement, or directive to meet and maintain a specific capital level for any capital measure. Furthermore, as of that same date, West Bank was categorized as “well-capitalized” under regulatory prompt corrective action provisions.

Dividends paid to the Company by West Bank are the major source of Company cash flow. Various federal and state statutory provisions limit the amount of dividends banking subsidiaries are permitted to pay to their holding companies without regulatory approval. Federal Reserve policy further limits the circumstances under which bank holding companies may declare dividends. For example, a bank holding company should not continue its existing rate of cash dividends on its common stock unless its net income is sufficient to fully fund each dividend and its prospective rate of earnings retention appears consistent with its capital needs, asset quality, and overall financial condition. In addition, the Federal Reserve and the FDIC have issued policy statements providing that insured banks and bank holding companies should generally pay dividends only out of current operating earnings. Federal and state banking regulators may also restrict the payment of dividends by order.

Due to the Company's participation in the CPP, any proposed dividend increase above the quarterly dividend amount paid in the quarter ended September 30, 2008, (i.e., $0.16 per share) is subject to the approval of the Treasury until December 31, 2011, unless the senior preferred stock has been redeemed or the Treasury has transferred all of the senior preferred stock to third parties.

West Bank, as a state-chartered bank, is restricted under Iowa law to paying dividends only out of its undivided profits. Additionally, the payment of dividends by West Bank is affected by the requirement to maintain adequate capital pursuant to applicable capital adequacy guidelines and regulations, and West Bank is generally prohibited from paying any dividends if, following payment thereof, West Bank would be undercapitalized.

The Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008 (“EESA”) and the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act of 2009 (“ARRA”) became law in response to the financial market difficulties and recession that have occurred since 2006. These statutes include a number of new corporate governance and executive compensation provisions which are applicable to the Company because of its participation in the CPP.

The enforcement powers available to federal and state banking regulators are substantial and include, among other things, the ability to assess civil monetary penalties, to issue cease-and-desist or removal orders, and to initiate injunctive actions against banking organizations and institution-affiliated parties, as defined. In general, enforcement actions must be initiated for violations of laws and regulations and unsafe or unsound practices. Other actions, or inactions, may provide the bases for enforcement action, including misleading or untimely reports filed with regulatory authorities. Applicable law also requires public disclosure of final enforcement actions by the federal banking agencies.

Finally, the Company is subject to regulation under the federal securities laws as administered by the Securities and Exchange Commission as well as the listing rules of the Nasdaq stock market. Both the SEC and Nasdaq have multiple requirements for financial reporting, corporate disclosures, and corporate governance.

ITEM 1A. RISK FACTORS

West Bancorporation’s business is conducted almost exclusively through West Bank. West Bank is subject to the general risks that challenge community banks. An investment in West Bancorporation’s common stock is also subject to the following specific risks.

There can be no assurances concerning whether or when West Bank will return to its historic profit levels.

West Bank has historically been a highly profitable bank, but it has recently suffered setbacks related to the difficulties in the financial and real estate sectors since 2007 and the general downturn in the economy. Although we are working hard to once again earn substantial profits, there can be no assurances concerning whether or when West Bank will return to its historic profit levels.

There can be no assurances concerning if or when we might resume paying dividends.

Our shareholders are only entitled to receive the dividends declared by our Board of Directors. The primary source of money to pay our dividends comes from dividends paid to West Bancorporation by West Bank. The Company had a net loss during 2009 and dividends were not paid during the third or fourth quarters. Although we have historically paid cash dividends on our common stock and would like to do so again when prudently possible, there can be no assurances that we will reinstate dividends at any particular future time or in any particular amount.

Our loan portfolio.

The largest component of West Bank's income is interest received on loans. West Bank's loan portfolio includes a significant amount of commercial real estate loans, commercial lines of credit, commercial term loans, and construction or land development loans. West Bank's typical commercial borrower is a small- or medium-sized privately-owned Iowa business person or entity. Our commercial loans typically have greater credit risks than residential mortgage or consumer loans because they often have larger balances, and repayment usually depends on the borrowers' successful business operations. Commercial loans also involve some additional risk because they generally are not fully repaid over the loan period and thus usually require refinancing or a large payoff at maturity. When the general economy turns downward, which is currently the case, commercial borrowers may not be able to repay their loans and the value of their assets, which are usually pledged as collateral, may decrease rapidly and significantly. Also, when credit markets tighten due to adverse developments in specific markets or the general economy, opportunities for refinancing may become more expensive or unavailable, resulting in loan defaults. The current economic conditions in West Bank's market areas are exerting considerable negative pressure on our existing loan customers and are limiting our ability to find credit-worthy new loan customers.

Our real estate loans expose us to increased credit risks.

A substantial portion of our loan portfolio consists of real estate-related loans, including real estate development, construction, and residential and commercial mortgage loans. Consequently, real estate-related credit risks are a significant concern for us. The adverse consequences from real estate-related credit risks tend to be cyclical and are often driven by national economic developments that are not controllable or entirely foreseeable by us or our borrowers. General difficulties in our real estate markets have recently contributed to increases in our nonperforming loans, charge-offs, and substantial reductions in our income. Although we believe that the real estate markets in which we make loans are not as depressed as some in the country, we believe that real estate-related credit risks continue to be significant in our markets.

Our accounting policies and methods are the basis of how we report our financial condition and results of operations, and they may require management to make estimates about matters that are inherently uncertain.

Our accounting policies and methods are fundamental to how we record and report our financial condition and results of operations. Our management must exercise judgment in selecting and applying many of these accounting policies and methods in order to ensure that they comply with generally accepted accounting principles and reflect management's judgment as to the most appropriate manner in which to record and report our financial condition and results of operations. In some cases, management must select the accounting policy or method to apply from two or more alternatives, any of which might be reasonable under the circumstances yet might result in us reporting different amounts than would have been reported under a different alternative.

We have identified three accounting policies as being "critical" to the presentation of our financial condition and results of operations because they require management to make particularly subjective and complex judgments about matters that are inherently uncertain and because of the likelihood that materially different amounts would be reported under different conditions or using different assumptions. These critical accounting policies relate to: (1) the allowance for loan losses, (2) determining the fair value and possible other-than-temporary impairment of investment securities available for sale, and (3) determining the valuation of foreclosed real estate properties. Because of the inherent uncertainty of these estimates, no assurance can be given that application of alternative policies or methods might not result in the reporting of different amounts of the allowance for loan losses, the fair value of securities available for sale, the fair value of foreclosed real estate, and net income.

Various factors may cause our allowance for loan losses to increase.

Our allowance for loan losses represents management's estimate of probable losses inherent in our loan portfolio. Management evaluates the allowance each quarter to determine that it is adequate to absorb these inherent losses. This evaluation is supported by a methodology that identifies estimated losses based on assessments of individual problem loans and historical loss patterns. In addition, general factors unique to each measurement date are considered, including economic conditions in certain geographic or industry segments of the loan portfolio, economic trends, risk profile, and portfolio composition. The determination of the appropriate level of the allowance for loan losses is highly subjective and requires management to make significant estimates of current credit risks and future trends, all of which may undergo material changes in a short period of time. Changes in economic conditions affecting borrowers, new information regarding existing loans, identification of additional problem loans, and other factors, many of which are not within our control, may require an increase in the allowance for loan losses. Determining the appropriate loan loss allowance is more difficult during periods of significant economic downturn. Any increase in the allowance for loan losses will usually result in a decrease in net income and capital, and could have a material adverse effect on our financial condition and results of operations.

Federal and state regulation could increase our costs or have other negative effects on us.

Both West Bancorporation and West Bank are highly regulated companies. Financial institution regulation is designed primarily to protect consumers, depositors, and the banking system as a whole, not shareholders. We are subject to regular examinations by the Iowa Division of Banking, the Federal Deposit Insurance Company, and the Federal Reserve. Although our companies are well-capitalized under regulatory standards and have recently returned to profitability, we have experienced substantial loan losses during the last two years. Consequently, our regulators could impose operating limitations on us such as a pre-approval requirement for dividend payments or a prohibition of brokered deposits that could limit our business practices or otherwise increase our costs at least until we return to sustained profitability. In addition, Congress, the Iowa legislature, and federal and state regulatory agencies are continually reviewing and changing financial institution laws, regulations, and policies. The recent unprecedented failures of financial firms, credit market disruptions, and investor losses have caused many to call for increased financial institution regulation. Changes to statutes, regulations, or regulatory policies, including changes in interpretation or implementation of statutes, regulations or policies, could affect us in significant, unpredictable ways.

Our participation in the Treasury's Capital Purchase Program may limit the amount of money available to pay common stock dividends.

On December 31, 2008, as part of the Capital Purchase Program ("CPP") offered under the Emergency Economic Stabilization Act of 2008, West Bancorporation raised $36 million of capital by selling the United States Treasury 36,000 shares of preferred stock and a ten-year warrant to purchase 474,100 shares of our common stock for $11.39 per share. The annual cash dividend that must be paid on the preferred stock is $1,800,000 through 2013 and $3,240,000 thereafter. We intend to pay the preferred stock dividends each quarter before considering allocating any funds for payment of common stock dividends. Therefore, our participation in the CPP may limit the amount of money available to pay common stock dividends.

Our participation in the CPP restricts our ability to increase dividends on our common stock, undertake stock repurchase programs, and compensate our key executives.

The terms of the CPP restrict our ability to increase quarterly dividends on our common stock above $0.16 per share, undertake stock repurchase programs, and pay certain types of executive compensation. Additional restrictions may be imposed on the CPP by the Treasury or Congress at any time, and any such restrictions may apply to us retroactively. These restrictions may have a material adverse effect on our operations, revenue and financial condition, our ability to pay dividends, or our ability to attract and retain executive talent.

Repurchase of the preferred stock sold to the Treasury could limit our ability to pay dividends in the future.

We would like to repurchase the preferred stock sold to the Treasury as soon as reasonably possible. Funds for the stock repurchase will likely come from a combination of retained earnings and the sale of new West Bancorporation securities. Either of these actions could negatively impact the price of our common stock and our ability to pay common stock dividends.

Substantial sales or dilution of our equity may adversely affect the market price of our common stock.

In connection with the CPP stock sale, we sold a warrant to the Treasury representing the right to purchase 474,100 shares of our common stock. If the warrant is exercised, the newly issued common stock would dilute the ownership interests of our existing shareholders. Our common stock is also relatively thinly traded. The market price of our common stock might fall if the number of shares of our common stock for sale at any particular time substantially increases due to the Treasury exercising its warrant and selling our common stock.

The loss of the services of any of our senior executive officers could cause our business to suffer.

West Bancorporation and West Bank are relatively small companies and have overlapping senior management. Our continued success depends to a significant extent upon the continued services of a relative few individuals, who generally do not have substantial backup. The loss of services of any of our senior executive officers could cause our business to suffer, at least in the short term. In addition, our success depends in significant part upon our senior management's ability to develop and implement our business strategies.

We are subject to liquidity risks.

We maintain liquidity primarily through customer deposits and other short-term funding sources. If economic influences change so that we do not have access to short-term credit, or our depositors withdraw a substantial amount of their funds for other uses, West Bank might experience liquidity issues. Our efforts to monitor and manage liquidity risk may not be successful or sufficient to deal with dramatic or unanticipated reductions in our liquidity. In such events, our cost of funds may increase, thereby reducing our net interest income, or we may need to sell a portion of our investment portfolio, which, depending upon market conditions, could result in us realizing a loss.

The market for banking and financial services in our market areas is highly competitive, which could adversely affect our financial condition and results of operations.

We operate in highly competitive markets. The West Des Moines metropolitan market area in particular has attracted many new financial institutions within the last several years. Customer loyalty can be influenced by a competitor's new products, especially offerings that provide cost savings to the customer. Some of our competitors may also be better able to attract customers because they provide products and services over a larger geographic area than we serve.

If all or a significant portion of the unrealized losses in our portfolio of investment securities were determined to be other-than-temporarily impaired with credit losses, we would recognize a material charge to our earnings and our capital ratios would be adversely impacted.

We analyze our investment securities quarterly to determine whether, in the opinion of management, the value of any of the securities is other-than-temporarily impaired. To the extent that any portion of the unrealized losses in our portfolio of investment securities is determined to be other-than-temporarily impaired and credit loss related, we will recognize a charge to our earnings in the quarter during which such determination is made and our capital ratios will be adversely impacted. Generally, a fixed income security is determined to be other-than-temporarily impaired when it appears unlikely that we will receive all of the principal and interest due in accordance with the original terms of the investment. In addition to credit losses, losses are recognized for a security having an unrealized loss if the Company has the intent to sell the security or if it is more-likely-than-not the Company will be required to sell the security before collection of the principal amount.

The ability of West Bank to pay dividends is governed by various statutes. West Bank, as a state bank, is restricted to paying dividends only out of undivided profits. These statutes provide that no bank shall declare or pay any dividends in an amount greater than its retained earnings, without approval from governing regulatory bodies. In addition, applicable bank regulatory authorities have the power to require any bank to suspend the payment of any and all dividends until the bank complies with all requirements that may be imposed by such authorities.

Any proposed dividend increase above the $0.16 quarterly dividend paid by the Company in the quarter ended September 30, 2008, is subject to the approval of the Treasury until December 31, 2011, unless the senior preferred stock has been redeemed or the Treasury has transferred all of the senior preferred stock to third parties.
