This morning, Kerr-McGee and Westport Resources announced a merger valued at approximately $3.4 billion. The company will retain the Kerr-McGee name and will be based in Oklahoma City. There are numerous strategic benefits to our company from this merger.

Westport's strong base of U.S. onshore natural gas assets complements our existing property base. These new assets, particularly the Greater Natural Buttes area in the Uinta basin in Utah, contain an extensive inventory of low-risk exploitation opportunities similar to our Wattenberg field outside of Denver. We believe that we will be able to capitalize on our tight-gas development expertise learned at Wattenberg in this area. Likewise, we also believe that we will benefit from the knowledge base that Westport brings to Kerr-McGee.

The nature of the opportunities that these new properties offer complements our high-potential deepwater exploratory program and will reduce the overall risk profile associated with achieving our annual production replacement. Our combined reserves, which will increase nearly 30% to approximately 1.3 billion barrels of oil equivalent, will be better balanced with high-value natural gas assets predominantly in the U.S. onshore and Gulf of Mexico regions and crude oil in the gulf and internationally.

In addition, this transaction will enhance the financial flexibility of Kerr-McGee. Our net debt as a percent of total capitalization will decline to approximately 42% and annual free cash flow is expected to increase by more than $150 million. Part of this increased cash flow is attributable to expected cost savings of approximately $40 million annually. Obviously, a portion of this will come from staff reductions associated with duplicate positions.

The Kerr-McGee and Westport employees are critical to the success of this merger. We want to select the most qualified employees for the positions that will be available whether it is a Kerr-McGee employee or a Westport employee. We will work very hard to go through the staffing process in a timely manner. The majority of the employees are in the oil and gas corporation; however, there are some employees that will be in our shared services organization. The employees of Kerr-McGee and Westport will be the ones who make this merger a success.

These are exciting times for Kerr-McGee and Westport. Employee meetings will begin on Thursday to discuss this transaction in greater detail. Thank you for your continued commitment and contributions to our success.
