BT LAUNCHES FAMILY MOBILE PACKAGE

WITH BIGGEST-EVER HIGH STREET BLITZ

BT today prepared to roll out its biggest-ever high street campaign for the launch of its new mobile phone package, BT Mobile Home Plan. It is set to blitz the UK mobile market in the run up to Christmas with a multi-million pound advertising campaign, supported by major high street retailers and a special introductory offer for consumers.

BT also unveiled plans to enable customers to text from their BT home phone and download "infotainment" services to their mobiles.

The BT package, backed by an advertising campaign worth over GBP5 million, will be available from November 1 in more than 1,000 retail outlets, including all branches of Carphone Warehouse, Phones 4U, The Link, and Comet. BT Mobile Home Plan phones will also be available in Argos stores from January 2004.

The launch is supported by analysis from Deloitte and Touche LLP which proves that BT Mobile Home Plan is cheaper for families than any pre-pay package from Virgin, Orange, Vodafone, T-Mobile and O2 for most usage profiles.

The new offering, which gives increased savings to families who buy their mobile phones together as well as free quick calls home, also came out cheapest in many categories against its rivals for contract customers.

According to the study, a family of four, with four mobile phones, but only requiring two new handsets under Mobile Home Plan, could save more than GBP75 per month on mobile phone bills.

Edgar Filing: BT GROUP PLC - Form 6-K

To coincide with the high street launch, BT is introducing a special offer on purchases made before December 31. Customers can get free handsets and three months' free line rental on each subscription.

The service is particularly good value for parents who are thinking of buying phones for themselves and other members of the family. Beyond the initial offer, line rental for the first handset is GBP12.50 per month, and GBP10 each per month for up to five additional handsets on the same contract. If family members already have handsets which they would like to keep, there is a SIM-only option which is just GBP7.50 per month for the first one and then GBP5 per month for each extra SIM.

Pierre Danon, chief executive of BT Retail, said: "The scale of activity around the launch of BT Mobile Home Plan in the high street shows how serious our intentions are in the consumer mobile market.

"Over the coming months customers can expect to see a stream of competitive new services which will be available to BT Mobile Home Plan users as part of our aggressive strategy to re-enter the consumer mobile market."

Next year, BT will launch BT Mobile World, a mobile "infotainment" service offering customers popular services such as games and ringtones direct to their BT mobile phones. BT will also be building mobile functionality into home phones with the launch of BT Text, a service allowing texts to be sent from a landline at a reduced cost.

BT Mobile Home Plan is the company's first step back into the mass consumer mobile market. BT is partnering with T-Mobile and acting as a Mobile Service Provider on the T-Mobile network.

The consumer mobile phone offerings are expected to play a key role in helping BT achieve revenue of GBP300 million from its mobility activities by the end of 2005.

Notes to editors:

About the study

Deloitte & Touche LLP performed an independent assessment of a pricing study performed by BT which compared BT Mobile Home Plan against the cost of similar packages from all its main rivals for 15 different combinations of users and calling profiles. The study ranked each operator's cheapest monthly bill if all the family opt for the same provider.

BT's offering scored well when members of the group called home often, taking advantage of the free offer, and also when families take a SIM card-only option for a family member who is happy to keep an existing handset.

With free calls home individual buyers can also take advantage of a competitive offer from BT Mobile Home Plan.
