Gentlemen:

We refer to your letter dated November 6, 2006, requesting confirmation of the information contained in the news article entitled "Moody's also upgrades PLDT, Globe" published in the November 4, 2006 issue of the Manila Standard Today, as quoted below:

Moody's Investors Service improved its outlook on local telecommunication companies Thursday night to stable from negative following an upward revision in the sovereign outlook. Moody's affirmed its Ba2 senior unsecured foreign currency rating on Philippine Long Distance Telephone Co. but changed its outlook to stable from negative. Moody's affirmed PLDT's Baa3 domestic currency issuer rating and maintained the positive outlook for the rating, which means that an upgrade in the actual credit rating is a possibility. x x x

Attached hereto is a copy of the press release issued by Moody's Investors Service entitled "Moody's revises PLDT's senior unsecured FX rating outlook to stable", which we downloaded from Bloomberg, since we have not received an official copy from Moody's Investors Service.

Respectfully yours,

Moody's revises PLDT's senior unsecured FX rating outlook to stable

Hong Kong, November 03, 2006 — Moody's Investors Service has today affirmed Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company's (PLDT) Ba2 senior unsecured foreign currency rating and changed its outlook to stable from negative. At the same time, Moody's has affirmed PLDT's Baa3 domestic currency issuer rating. The outlook for this rating remains positive.

"The action has been prompted by the change in outlook on the Philippines Ba3 country ceiling for foreign currency bonds to stable from negative," says Moody's Charles Macgregor, VP/Senior Credit Officer and lead analyst for the company.

PLDT's current foreign currency senior unsecured debt rating of Ba2/stable is above the Philippines' foreign currency country ceiling of Ba3/stable. The foreign currency senior unsecured debt rating incorporates convertibility risk, which is the likelihood of the government declaring a debt moratorium to counter a foreign currency crisis.

Moody's views foreign currency bonds subject to international law as less likely to be subject to a debt moratorium than foreign currency obligations subject to local law. Therefore, a differential exists between PLDT's foreign currency bond rating and the sovereign rating.

As such, PLDT's foreign currency bond rating is a function of its own risk of default and the probability of a Philippine government default on its foreign debt (implied by its B1 rating), the likelihood that the government would declare a moratorium in the event of a default (implied by the Ba3 foreign currency ceiling) and, if it did, the chances that it would exempt a company such as PLDT.

The domestic currency issuer rating outlook is positive, while the foreign currency rating has a stable outlook.

"At the same time, PLDT's credit metrics already exhibit a strong investment grade quality," says Macgregor, adding, "Hence, upward pressure on the local currency rating would now be a function of a more stable economic, political and social environment, and which could reduce the uncertainties associated with the company's prospective operating environment."

Indicators of a stabilising environment could be reflected by a strengthening in EBITDA, both absolutely, as in above PHP90 billion, and as a percentage of revenue, as in above 65%. A seamless transition to a 3G platform would also represent a positive development, while the foreign currency ratings would undergo an upgrade with an upgrade in the sovereign rating.

Downward rating pressure is not expected, given that PLDT currently enjoys a healthy financial and operating risk profile. Event risk is, however, apparent due to sovereign-related issues that could manifest themselves in changes to either the tax or regulatory environments. Such an outcome may be seen in weaker credit metrics, specifically EBITDA margin falling below 50%, debt/EBITDA rising above 2.0x, and FFO Interest coverage trending towards 4x. In addition, PLDT's foreign currency ratings are sensitive to movements in the sovereign rating.

Philippine Long Distance Telephone Company, based in Manila, is that country's leading provider of integrated telecommunications services.
