c/o Linda Crisp, Corporate Secretary

December 22, 2008

Dear Ms. Crisp:

This letter is in response to Consolidated-Tomoka Land Co.'s ("CTO") November 19, 2008 letter to Wintergreen Advisers ("Wintergreen") and CTO's Form 8-K filing of November 21, 2008.

We take serious exception to your extreme misrepresentations of facts. Wintergreen continues to have the same interest it has had from our very first meeting with CTO - to pursue the best interests of all CTO shareholders. Your November 19th letter and November 21st 8-K filing contain extensive mischaracterizations of Wintergreen's strategic recommendations to the Board.

Since you made public your November 19, 2008 letter by filing it with the SEC, Wintergreen is compelled to publicly correct many of the inaccuracies contained in such letter.

-CTO did recently offer Wintergreen two Board seats, but the offer was included in a CTO proposed standstill agreement that contained preconditions that were unacceptable to Wintergreen, and which were to last for a period of three years. The CTO proposal demanded:

- o Wintergreen would have to agree to vote in favor of any director recommended by CTO without regard to director candidate qualifications or conflicts

- Wintergreen would have to agree to vote against any proposal made by any third party in advance of knowing what fellow shareholders propose
- Wintergreen would have to give up its right under Florida statute to inspect company books and records
 - Wintergreen would have to agree not to propose matters for a vote by all shareholders
- Wintergreen would have to agree to not attempt to influence CTO's Board, management, or policies
 - Wintergreen would have to forgo the right to buy more CTO shares

- Wintergreen would have to forgo the right to seek legal remedy for any potential malfeasance on the part of CTO, its officers, and directors discovered by Wintergreen in our inspection process

–In your November 19, 2008 letter, you also claim that Wintergreen seeks to gain control of CTO. This is simply not true. Wintergreen seeks to have a board of directors whose loyalties lie with the company and its shareholders and not with either CTO’s management or Wintergreen. We reiterate that the directors we proposed are in no way affiliated with Wintergreen, nor would they represent or report to Wintergreen once on the CTO Board. They would merely act as overseers of management and of the corporate assets which belong to CTO’s shareholders. This objective representation of long term shareholder interests by individuals with meaningful, diverse backgrounds and expertise without any conflicting business or social obligations is in the best interests of all CTO shareholders. This is not control of the board by Wintergreen. This is board representation for the benefit of all shareholders.

At this time, CTO board members and management own approximately 2% of the outstanding stock of the company. That ownership has been largely acquired through granting of stock and stock appreciation rights by the board to management. There does not appear to be any significant purchase of CTO stock by current board members.

As we look to the other 98% of CTO stock, it has been purchased by investors like Wintergreen. However, all of those investors and Wintergreen lack any representation on the Board. The true owners of CTO have absolutely no voice with regard to the stewardship of their company.

–You imply that having the full board of directors being elected annually for one year terms rather than having a third of the board elected each year for three year terms –the de-staggering the Board – would somehow “confer considerable power” upon Wintergreen. All shareholders are empowered when they have the annual opportunity to vote for each director. Shareholders deserve the opportunity to annually express support or dissatisfaction with the board.

In point of fact, it is a widely supported best practice of corporate governance to give shareholders the right to annually vote for the full board. This is simply good corporate governance policy, and the majority of S&P 500 companies have de-staggered boards^[1]. De-staggering the Board will grant the 98% of all CTO shareholders an appropriate and meaningful voice. The approximately 2% of CTO stock owned by management would also have an appropriate voice in director election.

–CTO contends that by granting Board seats to Wintergreen’s independent candidates and de-staggering the Board, Wintergreen would be “in a position to assert majority control of the Board by 2010.” This overlooks the fact that any proposal to de-stagger the Board, made by Wintergreen or other shareholders, would require the affirmative vote of a super-majority of CTO shareholders and any proposed nominees for election as director would require the affirmative vote of a majority of shareholders.

–CTO categorizes the resignation of Wintergreen–nominated Board member Jim Jordan as voluntary, while failing to mention that Mr. Jordan voluntarily resigned at least in part because of his negative view of the conduct of the Board and of the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee. At the time of his resignation, Mr. Jordan stated “it is a mistake to combine the titles of Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, which goes against now generally accepted best practice in corporate governance” and “it was a mistake not to consider the candidates proposed by our largest shareholder, or other candidates, as part of our due diligence.” Mr. Jordan also stated that, on the issue of director candidates, those issues “should first have been vetted through the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee, which did not happen.”

Statements such as these by a former director would give any thoughtful investor concern about whether the Board is functioning properly and in the best interests of all shareholders. We have included a copy of Mr. Jordan’s resignation letter as an attachment to this letter.

–In your November 19th letter, CTO states that Wintergreen has advocated abandoning your 1031 income property strategy. This is a complete mischaracterization. What we have conveyed to CTO management and directors is that we are concerned with several aspects of your current strategy, including:

- CTO has entered into many flat, long-term leases which do not allow CTO to increase rents over time. Generally, in the leases which do call for rent increases over time, the rent adjustments are so insignificant that they would not keep pace with historical rates of inflation. While these properties do produce steady cash flows, they do not provide meaningful pricing power to CTO, or significant upside with regard to future values.
- CTO management and Board members represented to Wintergreen that CTO often reviews the income property portfolio and considers selective sales of properties. Yet as the market for these properties peaked along with the rest of the real estate market in the past three years, CTO continued to buy more properties at capitalization rates in the 6% to 7% range, versus the 8% to 9% range captured when the strategy was first implemented in 2001. Had some properties been sold out of inventory over the past few years when real estate prices were high, tens of millions of dollars could be available for more productive uses. Sale of a handful of these properties could have funded all the necessary road and infrastructure projects on company owned land for years to come. At this point in time, we believe the income property portfolio is in need of a rational and intelligent review.

- The crown jewels of CTO's assets are the approximately 11,000 acres of unencumbered land straddling several major roads on the east coast of Florida. Approximately 8,000 of these acres are contiguous. This asset could never be duplicated. Yet management is pursuing a strategy which requires selling off this precious and limited land in order to buy commoditized retail properties. If the CTO board and management continue to let this approach run its course, shareholders will have traded valuable plots of land with long term development potential for a portfolio of income properties scattered across the southeastern U.S.
 - You contend that we have advocated for you to discontinue land sales. In point of fact, we have consistently encouraged you to abandon your stated corporate goal of “accelerating the rate of annual sales.” Rather than the mass liquidation of property which appears to be CTO's current plan, we have encouraged CTO to sell parcels of land more selectively. We fully understand that certain sales must be made to fund the development of the western Daytona Beach lands and to encourage the westward growth of the city. For instance, the sale of land to a local hospital will create a need for new doctor's parks, retail malls and other facilities to support the hospital. However, instead of pursuing the development of these support facilities for the long-term benefit of shareholders, CTO seems intent on selling this land and allowing others to capture the upside potential these developments create. CTO should be developing and holding on to most of these properties, which would give the company a portfolio of properties with the ability to raise rents and participate in the long-term appreciation of their Volusia County landholdings.
 - With regard to your dividend and stock repurchase policy, we find it odd that you belittle Wintergreen in your November 19th letter for advocating a reduced dividend in order to focus on better uses of that cash (e.g., developing roads across your land or buying back stock). The very next day, CTO declared a reduced dividend so that you may repurchase your stock. Since our very first meeting with CTO, we have expressed our belief that the approximately $2 million the company spent on annual dividends could be better used to develop much needed roads and infrastructure to increase the value of company lands. Perhaps now CTO will finally begin work on Stagecoach Road, the much needed three mile road connecting LPGA Boulevard and State Road 40. Management has spoken of the desirability of this road for years, with no visible progress made as of yet.
 - At no point has Wintergreen encouraged CTO to take on “significant debt” which would put the company in “severe financial distress;” this is a complete misrepresentation on your part. On the contrary, the company's lack of considerable debt is one of the attributes that makes CTO such an interesting investment situation.
 - You state that had CTO followed the strategies Wintergreen has recommended, you would be facing “potential high vacancy rates in new self-developed properties.” This is a gross distortion of the facts. Wintergreen has never advocated speculatively constructing building after building on company lands without any forethought into who would fill the space. Quite to the contrary, we have encouraged CTO to build prudently on company land, only after the company has contracted tenants lined up.

We have consistently conveyed to the company our belief that there are immense opportunities for sensible self-development, and we would discourage wanton speculation in the construction market. The gradual westward growth of the city of Daytona Beach into company lands has provided, and will continue to offer, value to those with the vision and capital to capture it.

–It is peculiar that your letter mentions potential vacancies at speculative self-developed properties without mentioning the current vacancies at the Mason Commerce Center, the two 15,000 square foot buildings which the company built before management had lined up tenants to fill the space. The responsibility for any vacancies and the potential accompanying negative cash flows from the construction of these buildings belongs exclusively to CTO management and board members. This is not a course of action which was at any time promoted by Wintergreen.

–In your letter, you articulate a belief that Wintergreen has “expressed very strong support for the Company’s management team and our strategy and business plan.”

Our support of CTO management was contingent upon our belief that management was interested in increasing long term shareholder value. From the time of our initial filing with the SEC on May 5, 2006 until our January 22, 2008 filing we were of the opinion that we could rely on the expressed willingness of CTO management and board to be open to new ideas and strategies regarding self-development and alternate business strategies. It was only after we observed a lack of progress on the part of CTO’s management with respect to new ideas and strategies aimed at increasing shareholder value that we realized the best interests of all shareholders were not being attended to.

–In our January 22, 2008 SEC filing, we began to more clearly express our desire for CTO to focus on its Volusia County properties (“Wintergreen has initiated discussions with the issuer on maximizing the value of the Daytona properties, through direct development or partnerships. Wintergreen intends to continue its dialogue with, and to take an active interest in, the Issuer to encourage strategic focus on the Volusia county properties”). Had the company proven itself more open to the ideas of its shareholders and truly independent outside directors, the current situation would have been avoided.

I reiterate the need for representation of the interests of the 98% owners of CTO who actually purchased their shares, rather than the 2% of shares owned by management and board members, much of which was gifted to them. There is inherent conflict with members of the current board who, while appearing to meet the test of independence under the listing standards of the NYSE Alternext exchange, are part of an intersecting web of business and personal relationships with CTO and each other that bring their practical independence into question. The proper director’s role is to look out for the interests of all CTO shareholders rather than personal business interests.

We do not take pleasure in the adversarial turn our relationship with CTO has taken. Wintergreen generally enjoys healthy shareholder-management relationships and currently has no other 13-Ds on file with the Securities and Exchange Commission, nor shareholder proposals with any other portfolio company. However, as a significant shareholder of CTO stock, we feel we must be the advocate of better management, business strategy, and corporate governance for all shareholders.

We remain concerned about past misrepresentations on your behalf, in both letters and conversations with Wintergreen, regarding CTO's business strategy and dealings. The handling of the LPGA golf courses also causes us great concern, as CTO continues to lose over one million dollars annually on these operations, with no visible progress towards improving, or disposing of, the business.

In summary, we have no desire to "gain control of Consolidated-Tomoka," nor a desire to micromanage the company, and the proposals we offered in our standstill agreement are to the benefit of all CTO shareholders. Our director candidates are totally independent from Wintergreen and would represent the interests of all shareholders. We did not nominate them to push a certain agenda or business plan, but rather to act as intelligent and independent stewards of CTO's assets. They will not report back to Wintergreen on the dealings of the company any more than they will report to all other shareholders. The Wintergreen proposed independent directors offer an array of backgrounds, talents, and viewpoints that we believe would undoubtedly help the company maximize shareholder value in the long run.

We will take this opportunity to remind you, once again, that CTO continues to be in violation of both Florida Statute (Section 607.1602), and your own corporate bylaws with regard to our demand to inspect corporate books and records. Shareholders of the company have a right to demand copies of corporate records, and we have requested corporate records to enable Wintergreen to determine whether the affairs of CTO are being properly administered by CTO's corporate officers and to ascertain the value of CTO's stock. As of this date, Wintergreen has not received responsive electronic documents, nor the complete results of your search for responsive emails and other documents stored in archive format. CTO's bylaws state in section 6.6, Form of Records that, "Any records maintained by the corporation in the regular course of its business, including its stock ledger, books of account, any minute books, may be kept on, or be in the form of, punch cards, magnetic tape, photographs, microphotographs, or any other information storage device, provided that the records so kept can be converted into clearly legible form within a reasonable time. The corporation shall so convert any records so kept upon the request of any person entitled to inspect the same." Florida statute requires CTO to produce such documents within five days of receipt of notice. It has now been six months that have passed since our initial inspection request. While we realize document requests may be burdensome to the company and that CTO has provided some corporate records, there are huge omissions in what is anticipated by statute and general good business practice. CTO's lack of disclosure with respect to significant records "within a reasonable time" is in violation of Florida statute and corporate by-law. We encourage you to provide the requested records as expeditiously as possible.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ David J. Winters

Dear Bob and Bill:

Following our last Board meeting, I have given serious thought to the general direction of the Company, and to certain specific decisions made at that last meeting, and have concluded that I must resign from the Board, effective immediately.

My reasons are as follows: As you know, my view is that it is a mistake to combine the titles of Chairman and Chief Executive Officer, which goes against now generally accepted best practice in corporate governance. In seeking candidates to fill an anticipated Board vacancy, it was a mistake not to consider the candidates proposed by our largest shareholder, or other candidates, as part of our due diligence. Indeed, I believe those and related issues should first have been vetted through the Nominating and Corporate Governance Committee, which did not happen. I have also long opposed the payment of a dividend, given our largely long-term, value-oriented, institutional shareholder base; and was disappointed with the decision not to adopt a potential buy-back plan. On the broad subject of Company strategy, now would be a particularly good time to develop alternative strategies for the use of the company's land and cash flows to maximize shareholder value over time.

On all these issues, of course, I recognize that my views are only those of one director, but feeling as I do, it is best that I step aside now.

Sincerely yours,

/s/ James E. Jordan
