Avocent Acquisition-Talking Points

For responding to questions (internal and external)

Avocent Corporation is a public company and the proposed and pending transaction is subject to several approvals

Closing process will be about 90 days close expected somewhere around Jan. 1, 2010

We CANNOT speculate on any aspect of this pending acquisition

Discussions of this transaction must be limited to information that is already contained in public documents or in the following talking points

Agreement:

Q: Tell me about this agreement between Emerson and Avocent

Emerson (NYSE: EMR) and Avocent Corporation (NASDAQ: AVCT) announced on October 6, 2009 that they reached agreement for Emerson to acquire Avocent, a transaction that will further Emerson's ability to deliver total infrastructure management solutions to its data center customers around the world. The Avocent Board of Directors unanimously endorsed the terms of an all-cash tender offer of $25 per share, or approximately $1.2 billion.

Q: When do we expect the deal to close?

The purchase is expected to close around January 1, 2010, pending customary regulatory approvals and acceptance of the offer by Avocent stockholders holding a majority of Avocent shares.

Q: Why did Emerson acquire Avocent?

To enhance our data center power and cooling infrastructure solutions and strengthen our ability to help our customers drive efficiencies in the data center

Further, Avocent has strong relationships with many of our existing Marquee customers and has a strong, global presence.

More information is contained in the joint press release filed by Emerson and Avocent on October 6, 2009

Products:

Q: Tell me more about what Avocent does

Avocent is a market leader that blends hardware, software and embedded technologies in a unified platform that simplifies monitoring, managing and problem solving in any size data center.

Q: Does this put Emerson into competition with its current Marquee Accounts (including Server OEMs)? We saw something about that in the Wall Street Journal story?

This quote is factually incorrect. Emerson has no intention of getting into the server business and Avocent does not develop or manufacture server products

Avocent has established very good relationships with its server OEMs as they collaborate on technologies that provide users with the necessary access needed for server management. We expect this to continue, which will only further strengthen our relationship with these OEMs. Having a stronger relationship with the server OEMs is one of the reasons behind the acquisition.

We intend to integrate Avocent's capabilities with our own to provide enhanced infrastructure management capabilities in the data center.

We believe these enhanced capabilities will strengthen our OEM relationships as we provide solutions that allow IT and infrastructure equipment to work more seamlessly together.

Q: What will become of LANDesk as there has been no mention of LANDesk?

Avocent has a number of businesses from KVM, Embedded, SecureSwitch, OEM and LANDesk. All of these businesses will be acquired by Emerson as part of the acquisition. LANDesk is an important part of Avocent with some of the best customers and leading edge products in the industry. In fact, Emerson is a large user of LANDesk products. After the acquisition, Emerson will continue to ensure that LANDesk customers, along with all of Avocent's customers, receive world class products, support and overall value from the investments they have made in Avocent products.

Structure:

Q: What will the organization structure of the new entity look like?

Avocent will become a wholly-owned subsidiary of Emerson and will be managed as part of Emerson Network Power.

Q: How will Emerson and Avocent teams interact between now and closure?

Until the deal is finalized, it is business-as-usual for Emerson and Avocent. We are two separate companies and must operate accordingly.

Employees of both companies are not to discuss or share any confidential or proprietary information regarding products, services or customer relationships/strategies other than in connection with completing the acquisition.

Q: Who Should I contact regarding Avocent related questions between now and closure?

You may direct them to the Emerson Web site to see the news release

o www.Emerson.com

If you receive questions from the media they should be sent to Mark Polzin at Fleishman-Hillard (314.982.1758)

If you get financial questions or questions related to the agreement, they should contact Lynne Maxeiner, Emerson Director of Investor Relations (314.553.2197)

*If there are questions about products, sales, relationships, and other market or sales channel related questions, they should be addressed in the same manner they would have been addressed prior to commencement of the tender offer

Q: How will this acquisition affect relationships with customers? Any product, warranty, orders, customer support, etc. be affected?

We expect the transition to be seamless for customers, and we're excited and think they will be, too, about the complementary technologies and integrated solutions that will be available after the acquisition is completed.

People:

Q: How many Avocent employees will be affected by this announcement? Will they all become Emerson Network Power employees?

Avocent employs approximately 1,800 people who will become part of the Emerson Network Power team once the transaction is completed.

Q: Will the Avocent senior management team continue to lead the business?

We cannot speculate on what decisions personnel or otherwise might be made over time.

Facilities:

Q: How many Avocent facilities are there and will they all stay open?

Avocent has facilities around the world. There are no plans at this time to change that. We are continually evaluating all our capacity to assure we remain competitive and responsive to our customers' needs.

Q: Will Avocent remain headquartered in Huntsville?

There are no current plans to change that. Emerson and Avocent will be planning and managing integration over the coming months and any changes that might emerge from that discussion will be communicated as these plans are finalized.
